There's nothing wrong with them.Q: Call a function in the previous frame I want to call a function in the previous frame. I tried it but it didn't work. function parent() { myFunction(); } function myFunction() { // do something and pass the values parent(); } A: The parent function does not receive any values. Your code will work as long as you do something like: function myFunction(parameter) { // do something with the values console.log(parameter); } parent(parameter) { // do something and pass the values console.log(parameter); } This will pass the value to the parent function. A: That is not possible, the frames can't reference each other directly. JavaScript engines use a stack for executing code. It seems you can use it. The code would look like this: function Parent() { myFunction(); } function myFunction() { // do something and pass the values var stackFrame = Parent.apply(this, arguments); stackFrame(); } Hope this helps! 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to a dispensing system for dispensing a predetermined amount of fluid from a container. More specifically, the present invention relates to an improved dispensing system capable of separating an amount of fluid dispensed through a pipe from a container and recovering the container in a handle position. 2. Discussion of the Related Art Dispensing systems which dispense fluid from containers are well known in the art. Examples of such systems are shown in U.S. Pat. No. 5,477,655 to Dascoli and U.S. Pat.
